THE COLORED WIG MANIA AND THE TANGO GO HAND IN HAND.

MOUNT PLEASANT

MOUNT PLEASANT, March 12.—George Whippley, who is supply clerk at the standard mines, is possibly the only man in the state with a broken back who holds a regular position. Two years ago Whippley was driving a team at Standard when he went into the timber. The head was caught between two timbers, throwing him from the wagon, breaking his back. He was brought to the Mount Pleasant Memorial Hospital where Dr. W. A. Marsh performed a rare and successful operation of wiring the vertebrae. Whippley was placed in a plaster cast and for three weeks he hovered between life and death. At the end of that period he rallied and gradually grew stronger, until now he is able to resume the duties of his new position. The only untoward effects of the accident is that Whippley, who was formerly a broad-shouldered man, is now slightly stooped.

The Citizens Building & Loan Association is now making a search for a photograph of J. Lloyd Kulp in connection with the $100,000 reward for his capture. They have offered $200 reward for his arrest.

WILL BUILD BIG PLANT

Largest in the Country.

A coal and coke plant, second in size only to that owned by the United States Steel Corporation, which is the largest in the world, is to be constructed for the Lehigh Valley Company at an approximate cost of $4,000,000. It will supply fuel for the blast furnaces and foundries of which Charles Schenck is president.

The new plant is to consist of 24 acres, with a capacity for carbonizing 5,000 tons of bituminous coal daily. There will also be an enormous by-product plant, 10,500 cubic feet of gas, 16 to 24 pounds of sulphate of ammonia and coal tar and other by-products are obtained from each ton of coal in the carbonizing process.

The new plant, built in two rows, will extend a quarter of a mile. The first two batteries of 212 ovens, by the terms of the contract, will be built during the next 300 working days and the completion of the two other batteries is to follow within a similar period. One-half of the present plant is to be torn down to make way for the new ones.

"It's this beauty's hand," he murmured, rubbing his nose gently, thinking first of his person. An instant later he was thinking of the other half of the declaration. "That's just what I've been afraid of," he said. "I told you what would happen if that portrait came to light. It's your fault, Sara."

"But I have reason to believe she will not accept him, if it goes so far as that. You are quite safe in that direction."

"God, I'd hate to risk it," he muttered. "I have a feeling she's in love with him."

Vivian approached. "Sara, you must let me have Miss Castleton for the first two weeks in July," she said serenely.

"I can't do it, Vivian," said the other promptly. "I can't bear the thought of being alone in this big old barn of a place. Nice of you to want her, but—"

"Oh, don't be selfish, Sara," cried Vivian.

"You don't know how much I depend on her," said Sara.

"I'd ask you over, too, dear, if there weren't so many others coming. I don't know where we're going to put them. You understand, don't you?"

"Perfectly," said her sister-in-law, smiling.

"But I've been counting on—Hetty," said Sara.

"You could go up to Bar Harbor with the Williamses at that time. Tell her about the invitation, Vivie."

"It isn't necessary," said Sara coldly. "I scarcely know the Williamses. I've hesitated an instant and then went on with sardonic dimity. They're in trade, you know."

"That's nothing against 'em," protested he. "Awfully jolly people—really charming. Ain't they, Viv?"

"I don't know them well enough to say," said Vivian, turning away. "I only know we're all snobs of the worst sort."

"Just a minute, Viv," he called out. "Why does Miss Castleton say about coming? It was an eager question. It depended on the reply."

"I haven't asked her," said his sister-in-law. "How could I, without first consulting Sara?"

"You don't intend to ask her?"

"Certainly not."

After the Wrاندalls had departed, Sara took Hetty off to her room. The girl knew what was coming.

"Hetty," said the older woman, facing her after she had closed the door of her boudoir. "What is going on between you and Brandon Booth? I must have the truth. Are you doing anything foolish?"

"Foolish? Heaven help me, no! It is a tragedy," cried Hetty, meeting her gaze with one of utter despair. "As has happened? Tell me!"

"What am I to do, Sara darling? He has told me that he—"

"Loves you?"

"Yes."

"And you have told him that his love is returned?"

"I couldn't help it. I was carried away. I did not mean to let him see that I—"

"You are such a novice to the business of love," said Sara, smiling. "You are in the habit of being carried away. I fear."

"Oh, Sara!"

"You must put a stop to all this at once. How can you think of marrying him, Hetty Glynn? Send him—"

"I do not intend to marry him," said the girl, suddenly calm and dignified. "I am to draw but one conclusion. I suppose," said the other, regarding the girl intently.

"What do you mean?"

"Is it necessary to ask that question?"

The puzzled expression remained in the girl's eyes for a time, and then slowly gave way to one of absolute horror.

"How dare you suggest such a thing?" she cried, turning pale, then crimson. "How dare you?"

Sara laughed shortly. "Isn't the inference a natural one? You are forgetting yourself."

"I understand," said the girl, through pallid lips. Her eyes were dark with pain and misery. "You think I am altogether dead." She dropped perceptibly.

"You went to Burton's box," said Sara.

"Sara, you must believe me. I don't know how he was—justified. For God's sake, do me the justice to—"

"You went there with him?" insisted the other, her eyes hard as steel. "It doesn't matter whether he was married or free. You went?"

Hetty threw herself upon her companion's breast and would have strong arms about her.

"Sara, Sara, you must let me explain—you must let me tell you everything. Don't stop me! You have refused to hear my plea—"

"And I will refuse," cried Sara, throwing her off angrily. "Good God, do you think I will listen to you? If you utter another word, I will—"

"If You Utter Another Word, I Will Strangle You!"

new sensation. My change of heart will appear quite natural."

"Are you sure that the world will applaud your real design? You hate the Wrاندalls. Will they be charitable toward you when the truth is given out? Will Leslie applaud you? Listen, please: I am trying to save you from yourself, Sara. You will fall in everything you have hoped for. You will be more accurate than I. The world will pity me, it may even forgive me. It will listen to my story, which is more than you will do, and it will believe me. Ah, I am not afraid now. At first I was in terror. I had no hope to escape. All that is past. Today I am ready to take my chances with the big, generous world. Men will try me, and men are not made of stone and steel. They punish but they do not avenge when they sit in jury boxes. They are not women! Good God, Sara, is there a man living today who could have planned this thing you have cherished all these months? Not one! And all men will curse you for it, even though they send me to prison or to the chair. But they will not condemn me. They will hear my story and they will set me free. And then, what of you?"

Sara stood perfectly rigid, regarding this earnest reasoner with growing wonder.

"My dear," she said, "you would better be thinking of yourself, not of me."

"Why, when I tell my story, the world will help me, Sara Wrاندall. You have helped me, you have been good to me, no matter what sinister motive you may have had in doing so. It is my turn to help you."

"To help me!" cried Sara, astonished in spite of herself.

"Yes. To save you from execution—and even worse."

"There is no moral wrong in marriage with Leslie Wrاندall," said Sara, returning to her own project.

"No moral wrong!" cried Hetty, against. "No, I suppose not," she went on, a moment later. "It is something much deeper, much blacker than moral wrong. There is no word for it. And if I marry him, what then? Wherein lies your triumph? You can't mean that—God in heaven! You would not go to them with the truth when it was too late for him to—"

"To cast me off!"

"I am no such fool as that. The secret would be forever safe in that event. My triumph, as you call it, we will not discuss."

"How you must hate me, to be willing to do such an infamous thing to me!"

"I do not hate you, Hetty."

"In heaven's name, what do you call it?"

"Justification. Listen to me now. I am saying this for your good sense to seize and appreciate. Would it be right in me to allow you to marry any other man, knowing all that I know? There is but one man you can in justice marry: the one who can repair the wreck that his own blood created. Not Brandon Booth, nor any man save Leslie Wrاندall. He is the man who must pay."

"I do not intend to marry," said Hetty.

"But Leslie will marry some one, and I intend that it shall be you. He shall marry the ex-chorus girl, the artist's model, the prostitute! Wait! Don't fly at me like that! Don't assume that look of virtuous horror! Let me say what I have to say. This much of your story shall they know, and no more. They will be proud of you!"

Hetty's eyes were blazing. "You use that name—"

"—and yet you have kissed me, caressed me, loved me!" she cried hoarse with passion.

"He will ask you tonight for the second time. You will accept him. That is all."

"You must take back what you have just said to me—"

"Sara Wrاندall. You must unsway it! You must beg my pardon for that!"

"I draw no line between mistress and prostitute."

"But I—"

"Enough!"

"You wrong me vilely! You must let me—"

"I have an excellent memory, and it serves me well."

Hetty suddenly threw herself upon the couch and buried her face in her arms. Great sobs shook her slender frame.

Sara stood over her and watched for a long time with pitiless eyes. Then a queer, uneasy, wondering light began to develop in those dark, ominous eyes. She leaned forward the better to listen to the choked, inarticulate words that were pouring from the girl's lips. At last, moved by some power she could not have accounted for, she knelt beside the quivering body, and laid her hand, almost timidly, upon the girl's shoulder.

"Hetty—Hetty, if I have wronged you in—"

"—in thinking that you—I—"

"—she began brokenly. Then she lifted her eyes, and the harsh light tried to steal back into them. "No, no! What am I saying? What a fool I am to give way—"

"You have wronged me—terribly, terribly," came in smothered tones from the cushions. "I did not dream you thought that of me."

"What was I to think?"

Hetty lifted her head and cried out: "You would not let me speak! You refused to hear my story. You have been thinking this of me all along, holding it against me, damning me with it, and I have been closer to you than—"

"My God, what manner of woman are you?"

Sara seized her hands and held them in a fierce, tense grip. Her eyes were glowing with a strange fire.

"Tell me—tell me now, on your soul, Hetty were you—were you—"

"No! No! On my soul, no!"

"Look into my eyes!"

The girl's eyes did not falter. She met the dark, penetrating gaze of the other, and, though dimmed by tears, her blue eyes were steadfast and resolute. Sara seemed to be searching the very soul of her, the soul that laid itself bare, denuded of every vestige of guile.

"I—I think I believe you," came slowly from the lips of the searcher.

"You are looking the truth. I can see it. Hetty, I—I don't understand myself. Is it so—so overwhelming, so tremendous. It is so incredible. Am I really believing you? Is it possible that I have been wrong in—"

"Let me tell you everything," cried the girl, suddenly showing her arms about her.

"Not now! Wait! Give me time to think. Go away now, I want to be alone."

She arose and pushed the girl toward the door. Her eyes were fixed on her in a wondering, puzzled sort of way, and she was shaking her head as if trying to discredit the new emotion that had come to displace the one created ages ago.

Slowly Hetty Castleton retreated toward the door. With her hand on the knob, she paused.

"After what has happened, Sara, you must not expect me to stay with you any longer. I cannot. You may give me up to the law, but—"

Some one was tapping gently at the door.

"Shall I see who it is?" asked the girl, after a long period of silence.

"Yes."

It was Murray. "Mr. Leslie has returned, Miss Castleton, and asks if he may see you at once. He says it is very important."

"Tell him I will be down in a few minutes, Murray."

"I shall say no to him, Sara, and I shall say to him that you will tell him why I cannot be his wife. Do you understand? Are you listening to me?"

Sara turned away without a word

CHAPTER XIII.

The Second Encounter.

Booth trudged rapidly homeward after leaving Hetty at the lodge. He was throbbing all over with the love of her. The thrill of conquest was in his blood. She had raised a mysterious barrier; all the more zest to the inevitable victory that would be his. He would delight in overcoming obstacles—the bigger the better—for his heart was valiant and the prize no smaller than those which the ancient knights went out to battle for in the lists of love.

It was enough for the present to know that she loved him.

"What if she were Hetty Glynn?" What if she had been an artist's model? The look he had had into the soul of her through those pure blue eyes was all-conquering. She was worthy of the noblest love.

After luncheon—served with some exasperation by Patrick an hour and a half later than usual—he smoked his pipe on the porch and stared reminiscently at the shifting clouds above the tree tops.

He did not see the Wrاندall motor at his garden gate until a lusty voice brought him down from the clouds into the range of earthly sounds. Then he dashed out to the gate, bareheaded and coatless, forgetting that he had been sitting in the obscurity of trailing vines and purple blossoms the while he thought of her.

Leslie was sitting on the wide seat between his mother and sister.

"Glad to see you back, old man," said Booth, reaching in to shake hands with him. "Daddy, aren't you good afternoons, Mrs. Wrاندall. Won't you come in?"

He looked at Vivian as he gave the invitation.

"No, thanks," she replied. "Won't you come to dinner this evening?"

He hesitated. "I'm not quite sure whether I can, Vivian. I've got a half-way sort of—"

"Oh, do, old chap," cut in Leslie, more as a command than an entreaty. "Sorry I can't be there myself, but you'll fare quite as well without me. I'm dining at Sara's. Wants my private ear about one thing and another—see what I mean?"

"We shall expect you, Brandon," said Mrs. Wrاندall, fixing him with her foreboding.

"I'll come, thank you," said he. He felt disgustingly transparent under that inquisitive gaze.

Wrاندall stepped out of the car. "I'll stop off for a chat with Brandy, mother."

"Shall I send the car back, dear?" "Never mind. I'll walk down." The two men turned in at the gate as the car sped away.

"Well," said Booth, "it's good to see you, Pat!" He called through a basement window. "Come up and take the gentleman's order."

"No drink for me, Brandy. I've been in the temperance state of Maine for two weeks. One glass of beer and I shall always remember of Sara."

Booth sat down at the porch rail, hooked his toes in the supports, and proceeded to tell his tale. Then he struck a match and lit it. Leslie watching him with steady eyes.

"How do you like the portrait, old man?" he asked between punctuating puffs.

"It's badly. Sargent never did anything finer. Ripping."

"I owe it all to you, Les."

COKE PRICES HALT WITH HESITATING DEMAND FOR STEEL

But Operators Are Standing Firmly For Their Demands.

OFF-GRADE COKE CONDEMNED

As Unsatisfactory and Margin of Price
Is Widened, Foundry Coke Is Moving
Slowly; No More Steel or Merchant
Furnaces Looked to Blow in Soon.

From The Weekly Courier.
PITTSBURGH, March 11.—Some fair sales of standard furnace coke for March shipment have been put through in the past week, all at the regular figure of $2.00. One of the buyers is a Shenango valley merchant furnace interest, reported recently to have covered some second quarter coke at $2.10, while another buyer is located in Eastern Pennsylvania. No effort seems to have been made by the operators to obtain more than $2.00 for March coke, although the general quotation for second quarter is $2.10 or higher.

As a consequence of the operators' position on second quarter business and the less optimistic tone of the iron and steel markets, consumers are inclined to pursue a late inquiry for second quarter coke. While many of the contracts in force run through the half year, it is known that several contracts expire with this month, and the second quarter must be covered at some time. A few weeks ago the buyers seemed to be somewhat nervous over the outlook, and in two or three instances about $2.10 was paid for second quarter, evidently in the fear that delay would result in a still higher price. Now, however, the question among buyers seems to be whether $2.10 will be maintained for second quarter. No quotations are thus far openly made below that figure.

The prompt furnace coke market has eased off a trifle since the pressure caused by the poor railroad movement has been relieved, and while $2.00 is commonly asked, it is no secret that $1.90 could be done on fairly good coke.

There are some interesting rumors afloat as to issues raised by consumers in the case of contracts already closed, and it is even rumored that one contract has been canceled. These rumors cannot be verified but they indicate the nervous condition into which the market has developed.

It is reported that furnaces which have lately been using coke which sold at a slight discount from the regular market for standard coke have found their bargains quite unsatisfactory and are less disposed to consider such coke in future, with the result that off-grade coke is obtainable at a wider margin than formerly under standard grades, but without inducing any better buying.

Foundry coke is moving very slowly, except that shipments against regular contracts are about up to the average of the past few months. The market stands quotable as follows: Prompt furnace ..... $1.90-$2.00 Contract furnace ..... $2.00-$2.10 Prompt foundry ..... $2.40-$2.50 Contract foundry ..... $2.40-$2.50 Pig iron production is stationary. There are no furnaces blowing in and none blowing out. The movement on the part of steel works to blow in additional furnaces is over, at least for the time being, there having been practically no resumption since the middle of February. During the movement to increase production about two dozen blast furnaces were started and about an equal number of cold stacks were blown in. Among the merchant furnaces there has been practically no change in the rate of production, the output being substantially the same now as in December.

The pig iron market has been very quiet locally, and has shown some slight signs of weakness. It is claimed that the regular quotation of $14.25, Valley, on December iron has been shaded even on strain carloads, while as to basic there has been a shade at not over $13.00, Valley, when for several weeks the market had been claimed to be strong at $12.25, Valley. However, a reaction in basic iron was not altogether unreasonable, considering that there had been an advance of no less than $1.00 a ton, from the $12.25 figure which prevailed in several transactions early in January.

A MESSAGE TO THIN, WEAK, SCRAWNY FOLKS

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 20 lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh.

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gentle urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this sinful waste of food-building elements is to stop the leak, the recently discovered regenerative force that is recommended so highly by physicians here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point. Your druggist has Sargol, or can get it from his wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

Caution.—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach trouble, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder.—Adv.

—the suits are distinctive—different from anything the fashions have given us. Coats are shorter than ever—but they're fascinating! Unusual drapery and one, two or three tier effects distinguish the skirts. Closed at the bottom, skirts are wider for natural strides.

Not all the suits are elaborately styled. Recently in are semi-plain models for steady wear. Strong textured, conservatively toned inconspicuous suits for school girls and "women of affairs."

Labrador blue is the latest color; others are rust brown, spring greens, light tans and gun club checks.

The materials are new, odd and altogether pleasing. Suits now on view are $19.75, $25.00, $29.75 to $50.00.

Balmacaan

Balmacaan is one model. There are several others just as uncommon—and as well liked.

The buying power of this two-store organization has weight in getting the quantity price for its customers.
Coats are $15.00 to $35.00.

is modern, newly enlarged and in a new dress of quiet-toned paint. The department is newly equipped with display cases, suit compartments and crystal dress cabinets. Underfoot, rich carpeting adds attractiveness. Biggest in town, better stocked with better apparel, cleanest and brightest.

Confirmation Dresses

We've never had a stock that measured up, from the least expensive dress to the highest one, to the quality mark as these do. They are of French hued batiste and organdie—the finest, smoothest, most perfect weaves, without exception. The styles are full pleat and panel. The lace trimming is German Val—an extra fine grade. The embroideries used are sheer, finished at the edge, and in neat and attractive patterns.

Some have yokes and panels of hand-embroidery exquisitely worked. The designs are uncommon: bow knots, tiny baskets of flowers, and what not. All the dresses have silk sashes—white, pink or blue—four to six inches wide. Plain dresses are impossible. The narrowness of tucks, the best of needlework and the prettiest trimmings distinguish them. Prices are $5.95, $6.95, $7.50 to $10.00. Sized 8 to 14 years.
